

ELECTRONIC HOUSE

Advanced Search

latest product news

The $99 Media Blitz - Roku Box Keeps Expanding

The podcast aggregator Mediafly appears to be the first of many new channels expected for the Roku player from now until the end of the year.

latest product news

Toshiba Blu-ray Player Finally Coming in 2009

Toshiba will soon launch its first Blu-ray player, according to a Japanese newspaper.

recent posts

Good News, Bad News for Smart Grid Products of the Week: Blu-ray, LCDs & HTIBs
5 Lighting Control Solutions for Your Home Theater Install Deals with a Funky Foundation
Sony Gives 400-Disc Megachangers the Blu-ray Treatment

Print Email Comments \(0\) RSS Feed

Enhancements

Learn a Foreign Country's Lingo in a Snap with Navigator

Lingo Corporation's $70 Navigator has the style of an MP3 player and can translate in a dozen countries' languages.

Lingo Corporation's Navigator

December 05, 2007 | by Arlen Schweiger

If you travel a lot, whether it's for vacation or business, pretty soon you'll be able to learn the local lingo in no time.

Lingo Corporation has introduced the Navigator, which is a nifty little gadget that has the form factor of an MP3 player and the intelligence of a multilingual dictionary. It's a 12-language talking translator that can fit in your shirt pocket if you want.

Navigator comes in a white and dark gray finish and with its iPod-like feel you won't stand there looking like too dorky of a tourist when you're trying to find out how to say "Where's the restroom" the next time you're in Italy. It translates and speaks more than 9,000 common phrases in 12 languages and translates over 30,000 words.

All search functions are neatly and easily conducted using the built-in navigator wheel interface.

Navigator also features sightseeing information on the 12 countries it translates for (check with Lingo to see which ones) and allows users to save their 25 favorite sentences to memory. Aside from language conversion, the gadget also comes with a metric converter, currency converter, games, and a world time clock.

Also Filed in Enhancements

- Women and Technology: Say Goodbye to 'WAF'
- \(Window\) Shades of Green
- How to Save on Home Automation Expenses
- Home Gets High-Tech Overhaul in Just 2 Weeks
- Facial Recognition Offers Glimpse into Future Automation

ELECTRONIC HOUSE SWEEPSTAKES

Win a $2995 TheaterStation media server from Envive.

ELECTRONIC HOUSE SWEEPSTAKES

Win Cinema™ 90 home theater system from Paradigm!

$895 retail

Navigator will be available by March 2008 and carry a suggested retail price of $70.